

Train the Trainer — Winnipeg, MB

October 9-12, November 5-8, December 3-6, 2018

Studio 3 Training Systems is a highly specialized research based training organization, which provides high quality and specialized behaviour management training. Over 70% of our work is in the field of learning disabilities and autism, however, in recent years 'low arousal' behaviour management training has been developed specifically for staff working with people with an acquired brain injury, older adults, people with mental health problems and children/young people with emotional behavioural difficulties.

Challenging behaviours are an area of concern for carers and support staff and often represent a significant challenge to services leading to a breakdown of placement and injuries to care staff and the service users. However, research shows us that many incidents of challenging behaviour can be relatively easily managed by well trained and experienced staff.

Research also shows us that confident, well trained staff know when to intervene or withdraw, that they can often quickly defuse situations before they become critical and that positive management of situations using person centred, non-punishment and non-aversive based approaches often leads to a reduction in incidents involving physical and verbal aggression over a longer period of time.

At Studio 3, we decided that our philosophy is to train high quality trainers who are capable of delivering both behaviour management training and providing the 'state of the art' knowledge about the development of specialized behaviour management plans.

Based on our experience, professional qualifications are not in themselves prerequisites for successful outcomes. Successful candidates have included: clinical psychologists, qualified and unqualified nursing staff, service managers, teachers, staff from residential children's homes and care assistants.

Successful trainers will generally run a range of behaviour management training within their own organization. It is expected that trainers can best develop these skills by learning to deliver our core three day training course in the management of challenging behaviours. Many of you will already have completed a 3 day Low Arousal Course. It is not a pre-requisite to have taken the 3 day course to become a trainer, but previous knowledge and experience with the Low Arousal Approach is helpful.
